

Winston Supports Afghan Journalist Who Fled the Taliban

NOVEMBER 12, 2021

In August, as Kabul fell to the Taliban with breathtaking speed, Fatema Hosseini knew that her work as a journalist—investigating corruption, giving voice to women, and criticizing the Taliban—put her life in peril. Fortunately, Fatema had freelanced for USA Today and her colleagues there reached out to her and feverishly worked their contacts to get Fatema safely out of Afghanistan.

Fatema arrived in Washington, D.C. on the 20th anniversary of 9/11 and was greeted by USA Today Editor-in-Chief Nicole Carroll. Fatema arrived in the U.S. on a 90-day visa the USA Today team had secured for her, so Nicole quickly reached out to her neighbor, Washington, D.C. partner Chris Man for help in securing permanent asylum for Fatema in the U.S.

Today, less than three months after the fall of Kabul, Fatema has been accepted to the University of Maryland's journalism program and a Winston team that includes Chris Man, Jennie Porter, Lily Klein-Evans, and Nareeneh Sohbatian is helping her file for asylum.

Recently, Fatema and Nicole shared Fatema's story with Winston attorneys and staff during a riveting presentation sponsored by the firm's Diversity and Inclusion Committee and Winston's Women's Leadership Initiative.

Help Fatema pay for her education, housing and living expenses by donating to her Go Fund Me site here.

You can help protect and defend journalists around the world here.

Read an in-depth USA Today story about Fatema's escape to safety here.

1 Min Read

Related Locations

Washington, DC

Related Regions

North America

Middle East & Africa

Related Professionals

Sylvia James

Christopher Man

Nareeneh Sohbati

This entry has been created for information and planning purposes. It is not intended to be, nor should it be substituted for, legal advice, which turns on specific facts.