Celebrating its 15th anniversary, Winston & Strawn's Charlotte, North Carolina office is located in what CNBC has named the best state for business two years in a row. Through significant lateral hires and strategic associate recruitment, our team of 20+ attorneys—more than half of which are women and include firm leaders such as Kobi Kennedy Brinson—represent many major national and international companies headquartered in the city. Our team also provides legal services to all of the top ten financial services companies in the U.S., which aligns with Charlotte's reputation as the second-largest banking center in the country.

Winston & Strawn Charlotte has demonstrated an unwavering commitment to fostering a diverse work environment, ensuring that individuals from all backgrounds are welcomed and supported. Additionally, Charlotte's charitable efforts and pro bono work showcase our dedication to making a positive impact in the community. Notably, our Operation Sandwich initiative exemplifies our commitment to helping those in need, raising funds for A Roof Above, an organization dedicated to ending homelessness. Furthermore, the Charlotte office's sponsorship of The Center for Community Transitions' Art Auction, as part of the firm's CEASE Initiative, demonstrates our support for individuals transitioning from incarceration to society. Through these various initiatives, Winston & Strawn Charlotte exemplifies its dedication to diversity, philanthropy, and pro bono work, contributing to a more just and equitable society.

This close-knit office welcomes a small number of law students each year to participate in its summer associate program, which provides work in litigation and transactions and features social and community activities including a cooking class, Charlotte Squawks show, Habitat for Humanity project, and other local adventures.

“Winston will give you everything the other large firms will—high-stakes work for large clients—but it is the people that set Winston apart. From the staff to the attorneys, there is no one at Winston who is not committed to associates' development and success.”
