Sarah focuses her practice on sports, complex commercial, and antitrust litigation matters. As a former federal law clerk, Sarah leverages her inside understanding of the judicial process to bring creativity and effective solutions to her cases.

In the sports industry, Sarah provides pre-dispute legal advice and represents clients in mediation, arbitration, and federal and state court litigation. Sarah has represented a variety of sports industry clients, including college and professional athletes, sports agencies, and a professional soccer league.

In the areas of antitrust and complex commercial litigation, Sarah has represented plaintiffs and defendants in a variety of industries through various phases of litigation, including case initiation, discovery, class certification, dispositive motion practice, and appeals

Sarah has more than two years of experience as a federal judicial clerk to the Honorable Esther Salas, United States District Judge (District of New Jersey). She draws upon her judicial clerkship experience in her representation of clients in litigation.

Key Matters

- House v. NCAA: Sarah represents putative classes of college athletes in an action against the NCAA seeking damages for restraints on the use of student-athlete names, images, and likenesses.
- North American Soccer League v. United States Soccer Federation and Major League Soccer: Sarah represents the North American Soccer League in a federal antitrust lawsuit seeking to recover damages inflicted on the League by the United States Soccer Federation's and Major League Soccer's conspiracy to arbitrarily enforce the Federation's rules in order to protect Major League Soccer from competition from other leagues.
